

AUSTRO TROOPS RELEASED; WILL MEET ITALIANS

FALL OF LEMBERG RELIEVES LARGE FORCES—RUSHED TO ISONZO FRONT.

DESTROY BRITISH NAVY YARDS

Berlin Reports Zeppelins Caused Great Damage at South Shields.

(Associated Press) Berlin, June 22—Lemberg, the Galician capital, which has been in the hands of the Russians since Sept. 2, last, and whose capture was one of the earliest important successes of the Muscovites, has been conquered after a severe battle, according to a report from the headquarters of the Austro-Hungarian armies. The city fell before the advance of the second army.

Early in the day three Austro-German armies were within a few hours' march of Lemberg. The Russian rear guard was fighting desperately on the ridge west of the city, and it was believed that the stubborn defense covered the main retreat from the capital.

Railroad Is Captured. The railroad and roadway to Lemberg are in Austro-German hands and, according to a dispatch from Austrian headquarters, a wedge of the Kaiser's troops cut through the Russian wing, parts of which retreated northward, while the remainder joined the main force around the city.

Russians Withdrawn. The Russians have withdrawn the most of their forces and supplies from the city, and Galicia is now practically cleared of Russians whose ousting, it is expected in Berlin, will have a far-reaching political effect in maining the status quo in the Balkans.

Lack of Ammunition. Lemberg's fall is due chiefly to the great numbers of Germans, the immense quantity of German heavy artillery sent to assist the Austrians, and the shortage of shells on the part of the Russians.

Thousands Killed. Hundreds of thousands have been killed, wounded and captured in the Galician campaign according to the official announcements from Petrograd, Berlin and Vienna.

Berlin Jubilant. There is great jubilation in Berlin over the fall of Lemberg, which was taken by storm. Before their retreat the Russians sent back all the artillery they could move, then fled in a panic, says a correspondent; the units disbanded and the army became a mob. 60,000 Russians have been captured since June 12.

Russ Claim Victory. On the Dniester River, Petrograd claims a Russian victory resulting in heavy losses for the enemy and the capture of 3500 prisoners. Near Bukovina the Russians assert another 1000 were taken.

Reinforcements on Isonzo. Important Austrian reinforcements relieved from Galicia, have arrived on the Isonzo front, says Rome, who claims that the first of these reinforcements have been defeated.

Dr. Howard Will Open Big Assembly On Sunday, July 31

Dr. Clinton N. Howard of Rochester, N. Y., will open the Rock River Assembly Saturday July 31, with his wonderful and interesting lecture, "Why God Made a Woman."

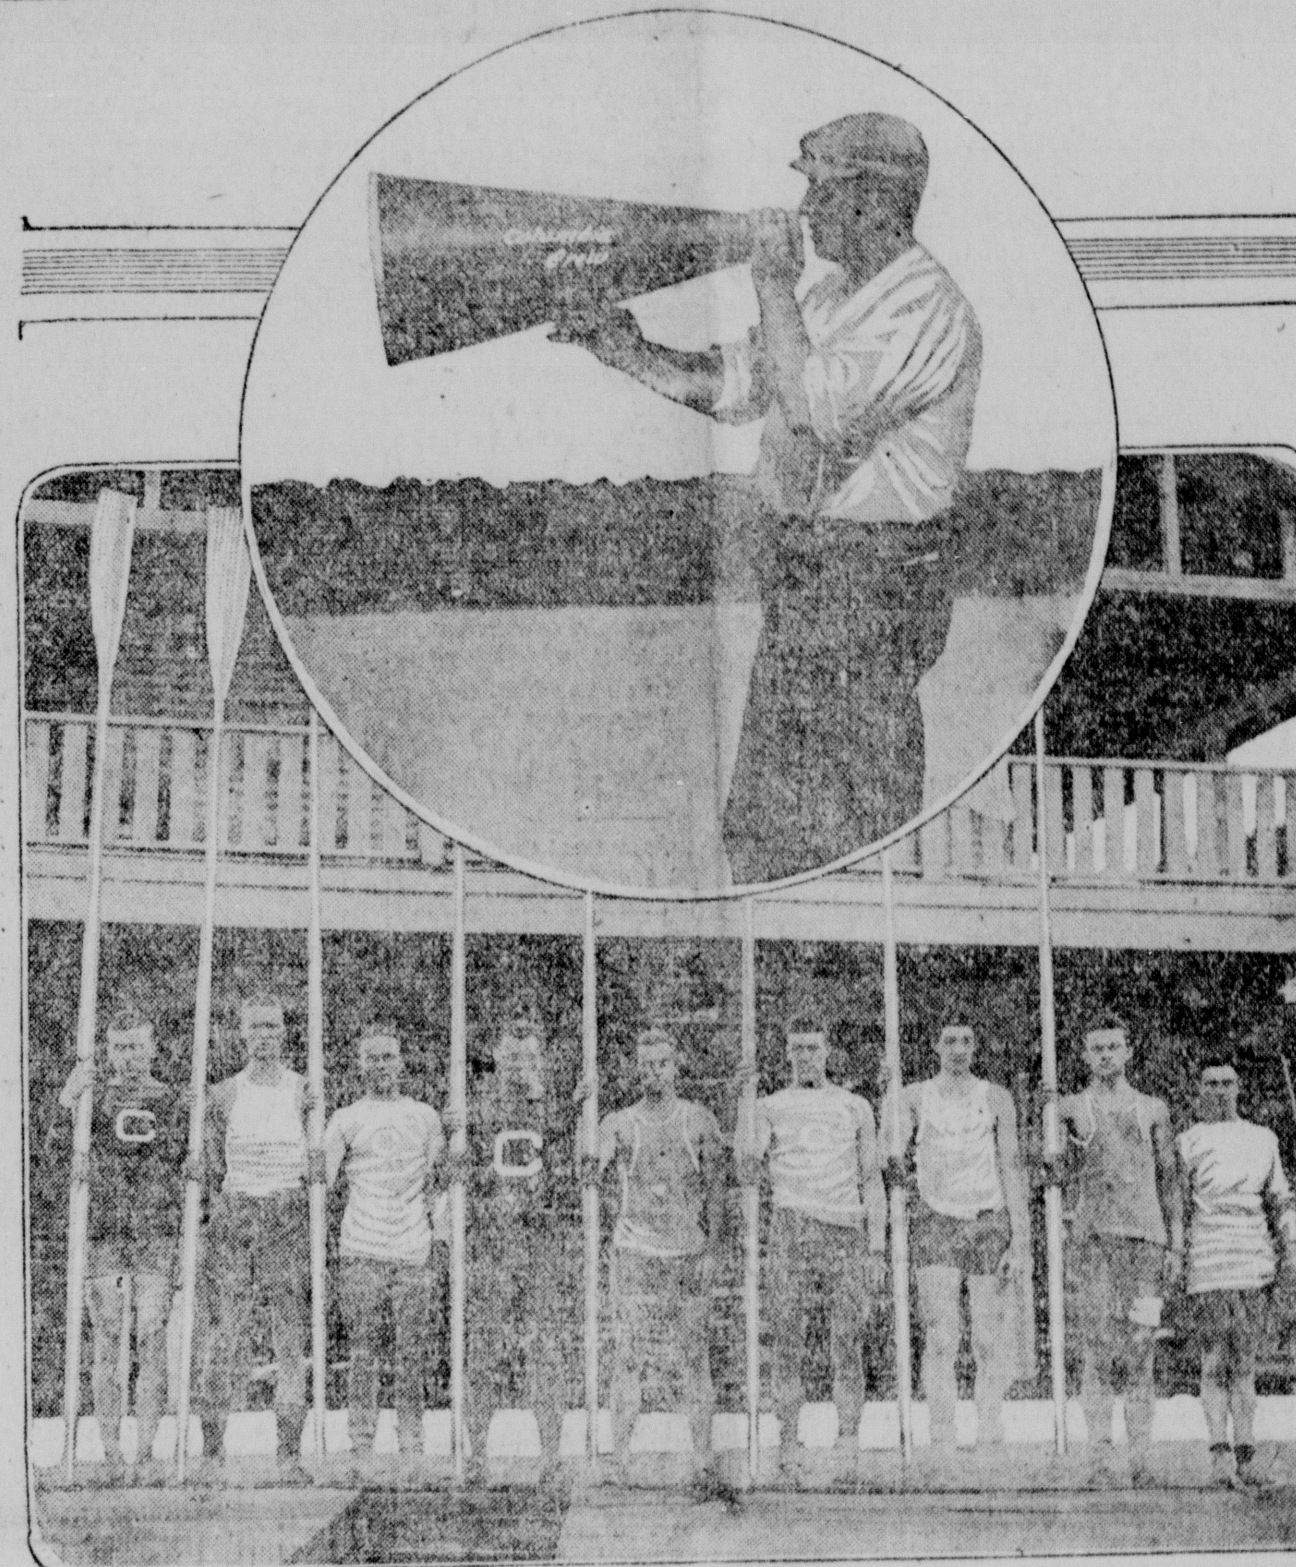

Dr. Howard comes of a long line of heroic Quaker ancestry, who were preachers, abolitionists, reformers and statesmen for many generations. He is descended from John Howard, the prison reformer, and Sir John Howard, Lord Treasurer, who commanded the British army at Flodden Field when the Scots were routed and James IV. slain.

His father was William Howard, Knight of Wigenhall, a man of rank and figure, whose resting place is in the old Howard chapel at East Winch.

The first ten years of Mr. Howard's early manhood were spent in travel and laid the foundation for his successful career on the platform.

Had Early Successes. He drank deep of the spring that had fired the hearts of his fathers, and by thirty had become widely known as an orator and reformer. He was called from city to city, where he conducted effective campaigns for civic righteousness, and became known as "The Little Giant" of the reform platform. Locating in Rochester, N. Y., he established a Sunday

Seven Killed In Earthquakes In Lower California

Three Seismic Shocks Felt There Last Night And This Morning

(Associated Press)

El Centro, Cal., June 23—Originating in Lower California, seismic convulsions shook the Imperial Valley of California last night and today. Its cluster of little towns are partially in ruins, while fire did considerable damage. Seven dead reported from Mexicali, across the street boundary from Calexico, Cal., but no dead are reported from the other points. There were three shocks, the first at 8 o'clock last night, when the lights went out in the towns throughout the valley, leaving them in darkness and great confusion.

Several buildings at El Centro collapsed, telegraph and telephone wires leading into the stricken district going out of commission. Last reports from El Centro say fire which was started when these buildings collapsed is raging in that city. The exact extent of the damage done is not known at this hour.

At San Diego two severe shocks were felt, the first at 8:02 and the second at 8:57.

Calexico, on the Mexican border, is in flames, according to late reports.

Advices from San Diego say that at 10 o'clock at night the entire valley was plunged into darkness, following the first shock.

MAY HOLD WOODMEN PICNIC AT AMBOY

SPECIAL COMMITTEE IS APPOINTED TO ARRANGE FOR AFFAIR.

It was the sentiment of the executive committee of the Tri-County Picnic association at a meeting Tuesday evening to hold a big picnic this year about the middle of August. President A. A. Richtmeyer appointed a committee composed of L. W. Mitchell, John Coe of Sterling, Elmer Ryerson and Wm. B. Mitchell of this city to decide on a location for the gathering. They will meet in this city Saturday evening, July 3 to agree on the place. Inasmuch as the picnic has always been held in Dixon there is likelihood of this year's affair being held at Amboy, if the lodge of that city is willing to co-operate with the picnic association in making it a big event.

Graduates Of Amboy High School Prove Its Efficiency

The standing of the Amboy High School and the efficiency of the work done in the school can be seen no better than by following up the graduates of the institution. The following letter regarding a member of the class of 1911, was received last week:

Urbana, Illinois, June 15, 1915.

Dear Sir: I have the honor to inform you that the University Council of Administration has approved a list of names of the students to whom the College of Engineering wishes to award final honors because of the excellence of the work done during their junior and senior years.

It gives me great pleasure to inform you that Mr. Edward Allen James is included in this list of the highest tenth of his class, and likewise that he has been awarded special honors because of the highest scholarship record in the College of Engineering. I desire to congratulate you upon this recognition of his standing as a student. He has made a most commendable record.

Very truly yours,

C. R. RICHARDS, Acting Dean of the College of Engineering.

Won Scholarship.

Edward James is the son of Atty P. M. James of Amboy. His excellent work at the university is but a continuation of similar work done during his high school course, at the end of which time he won a scholarship by ranking first in a county competitive examination. This gave him free tuition during his four years at the university.

Besides receiving the Final and Special honors in his senior year Mr. James was awarded Preliminary honors during his sophomore year. On account of his high scholarship Mr. James was a member of Eta Kappa Nu, the honorary electrical engineering fraternity, and a member of Tau Beta Pi, the honorary general engineering society. During the year 1913-14 Mr. James was commissioned as a lieutenant in the university regiment and during the past year he has ranked as a captain and detailed as Regimental Quartermaster. Mr. James has also been appointed by Gov. Dunne as Brevet Captain in the Illinois National Guard.

Edward Allen James graduated from the University of Illinois June 16, 1915, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Science in the College of Engineering.

Such an enviable record of a former student of the Amboy High school not only speaks well for the school but should be an inspiration to each student of the Lee county schools who aspire to a higher education.

ENTRY LIST FOR BIG RACE ANNOUNCED

ELIMINATION CONTESTS WERE COMPLETED TUESDAY EVENING—24 WILL START.

OLDFIELD TO ASSIST RESTA

Veteran Who Drove 111 Mile Race Will Be Relief Driver for Italian Speeder.

Chicago, June 23.—"The fastest track in the world"—Chicago's new board speedway at Broadview, was cleared for action today. Only starters duly qualified to race in the 500 mile Auto Derby remained in possession of the two mile oval, for the elimination trials, which were completed yesterday afternoon, settled finally which of the aspirants were to be allowed to take a whirl at the $54,000 prize race on the new course. Those who failed to make the course at a clip of 85 miles an hour or better were disqualified last night and the track was left clear today to the score who made the required time. They put in their time in practice work and their performances were watched by thousands of Chicagoans and visitors to the city, many of whom have been daily spectators during the tryouts of the last week.

Official Entry List.
Here is the official list of Saturday starters, the order of starting and the average time per hour each made in the elimination trials:

1. Dario Resta (Peugeot car) 110.4 miles; 2. Howard Wilcox (Stutz) 104.75; 3. G. H. Anderson (Stutz) 104.60; 4. Earl Cooper (Stutz) 104.60; 5. William Carlson (Maxwell) 103.20; 6. Ed Rickenbacher (Maxwell) 103.00; 7. Bob Burman (Peugeot) 101.00; 8. Ed Van Raalte (Sunbeam) 100.80; 9. G. Pororato (Sunbeam) 98.65; 10. Louis Chevolet (Deage) 96.90; 11. Charles Keenen (R. Friday morning the tanks will be loaded with gasoline and the pits stocked with tools, extra parts and tires in anticipation of breakdowns. Then everything will be in readiness for the duel of speed monarchs for the honor of a new world record to be fought out at the Speedway Saturday.

Oldfield Will Drive.
When Barney Oldfield, driving his old Christie, shattered the world's record established by Dario Resta the fore art of last week, automobile racing enthusiasts flocked up to the hands. Barney had signified his intention of taking a whirl at the Resta mark and with ten thousand persons watching his performance, the daredevil driver who has driven on every track in the country, whizzed out upon the course Sunday afternoon and when he had completed his performance, a new world's record had been hung up. Barney covered the two mile course at a rate of speed officially timed at 111 miles an hour.

Oldfield has been forced to submit to a great deal of criticism because of his refusal to compete in any of the big races. However, the smiling Barney offers the defense that he cannot procure a suitable mount for a five hundred mile grind and his performance of Sunday satisfied the fans that he can do the speed at short distance, but he declared his old front drive Christie is not in shape to withstand the rattle for five hundred miles. Oldfield has agreed to work as a relief driver to Resta and his smiling face will be seen upon the track during the grind Saturday.

Vest Pocket Essays

P. P. JOHN GUTENBERG

John Gutenberg was born within sight of the Rhine at Mainz in 1410.

His parents were noble, but in politics. They were expelled during a change of administration from Mainz and went to Strasburg.

This was as great a miscalculation as Florence made when she gave Dante twenty-four hours in which to get out of town. Gutenberg became the father of printing, the greatest of all modern powers. But he never returned to Mainz and let the home folks brag about their illustrious citizen. He was invited to come back and live, but refrained and contented himself with getting citizens of Mainz pinched for debt whenever he found them in Strasburg.

Gutenberg early applied himself to the task of getting wealthy quickly. He was one of the early promoters and was always getting a little capital together to promote a new invention which would make millions. He lost a lot of money on an improved looking glass designed to make a fair face look less like a sack of oats than the old kind did. Finally we hear of him borrowing 50 gulden to form a company for the purpose of printing books with types.

This was as foolish a proposition as airship companies were in 1880, and Gutenberg received the hoarse hoot wherever he went. For ten years he wandered around Southern Germany borrowing small amounts here and there, and putting them into the business and in 1455 he bound up his first copy of the Gutenberg Bible, and put the first edition on sale.

This produced an enormous sensation and it has been growing ever since. In a very few years print shops were running all over Europe and ten thousand monks who wrote fine hands were hunting new jobs. But this did not do Gutenberg any good. His shop lost money, creditors took it away from him and he died in 1468, poor and almost forgotten.

One copy of the Gutenberg Bible is worth enough today to place Gutenberg beyond the dreams of avarice. But it is too late for him to appreciate this. All we can do for him is to erect monuments to memory of the most useful get-rich-quick man the world ever had.

DEMENTTOWN DOINGS

Anse Frisby, our local Croesus, created an awful lot of excitement for about a minute yesterday. Anse hasn't never been known to give nobody nothin' and he hasn't never been known to spend a cent for nothin he could do without, even for new suspenders buttons. But yesterday he bought 15 cents worth of muslin in the Big Store for his wife to piece Euphemia's party dress with and he give Bijie Hubbard, who waited on him, a quarter. Bijie gave him back a dime in change and Anse handed it right back to him and sez "I don't want that dime." Everybody in the store set right up and liked to have dropped dead at such onheard-of generosity when Anse sez "Gimme another dime, that one's a Canadian."

Did you ever notice that when a person can sing or play it's hard to start them, while if they can't do either it's equally hard to stop them?

If a fellow would always do what his friends think he should he would not be making the same mistakes over and over again. He'd be making others.

The decorations were in red and white, dining room, parlor and reception hall being done in red and white, with festoons and red roses.

During the afternoon Mrs. Joy Atkinson favored with piano solos Miss Hazel Stanbrough, a daughter of the hostess, gave a reading and guessing games pertaining to brides and grooms furnished merry entertainment. Later the bride-to-be was given the end of a cord to wind. This led her upstairs where a book waited her reading. When she returned she found a small table and chair decorated in white and under a white wedding bell. The table was piled high with gifts. As she opened the first one and started to read the note a shower of rice descended from the wedding bell upon the bride-to-be's head. Many beautiful pieces linen were received by Miss McCleary.

A dainty two course luncheon was served in the dining room by the hostesses assisted by Miss Helen Davis. The centerpiece of the dining table was a mirror upon which stood a miniature bride and groom. The bride was dressed in cream satin with a veil caught with forget-me-nots and a bridal bouquet of the same flowers. The tiny couple stood under an arch of smilax and roses. ## JAPAN'S "WHIP HAND."

Russia met at Przemysl a terrible onslaught of Austrian fire. Yet the Russian invaders were able to take that fort when it was strongest, and they held it for months against one of the fiercest attacks that war has seen. Suddenly their defense crumbled, and Przemysl fell again into the hands of the Austrians.

The Russians' excuse that they were forced to give up Przemysl and the accompanying territory because their ammunition failed has been taken merely as an excuse. But there is said to be an explanation back of it which may explain a great deal and signify more. When the Russians started on their campaign they were receiving liberal supplies of ammunition from Japanese factories. As their campaign progressed, Japan's issue with China arose. For a time it was uncertain whether China would grant Japan's demands, or would fight to have her own way. With the appearance of this possibility, the Japanese supply of arms and ammunition to Russia ceased at once. Because of the failure of that supply, or such is the information, Russia failed and had to retire from Przemysl. But Japan and China have made terms, and the danger of a resort to arms there has passed. It may be assumed that Russia now has in Galicia plenty of men, and that they are well supplied with arms and ammunition.

Japan, if this is true, holds the "whip hand." Japan is nominally with the allies. But with the other allies straining all the resources of England, France and America to supply their needs, Russia must depend on Japan and Japan has no scruples about neutrality or love for Germany which should prevent her from making the most of this advantage.—New Haven Register.

AMMUNITION FROM AMERICA.

The remark is often heard that if the United States would place an embargo on munitions it would soon put an end to the war. In view of this contention, the following statement is most interesting:

Persons who have given credence to assertions that the war would soon end if American manufacturers should refuse to sell ammunition and arms to the belligerents, may be interested in some estimates made by World's Work, a magazine which prints information about productive activities.

One estimate is that all the artillery ammunition that is sold to the allies in the course of a month by American manufacturers amounts to about one-twentieth of one per cent of the total of such ammunition that is used by the armies in that period.

Another is that the rifle cartridges exported from the United States in a month amount to about one-eighteenth of one per cent of all the cartridges discharged by all the armies of the allies within that time.

There is no reason to doubt the approximate accuracy of those estimates. They show the preposterousness of the assertion that American manufacturers of arms and ammunition could hasten the end of the war by refusing to sell the products of their factories to the belligerents.

BRONZE HORSES HIT TRAIL.

Though she is head over heels in war, Italy is holding her horses—the bronze steeds of the church of St. Mark in Venice.

Nobody knows how old these colossal statues are, who made them, or whence they came. It is supposed that they were fashioned to celebrate some Roman triumph. For years they had stood in Constantinople, whence they were removed by Doge Enrico Dandolo of Venice in 1204 after Constantinople had fallen. After nearly six hundred years in St. Mark came the whirlwind Napoleon, looked on the horses and removed them as spoils of war to Paris in 1797, whence the emperor of Austria removed and restored them to Italy after Napoleon was definitely disposed of in 1815.

Now that Italy is at war with Austria, with Venice as always exposed, but no longer in the days of aircraft isolated by water, the bronze horses that guard the resting place of the relics of St. Mark have been removed to a place of hiding. Remembering Louvain and Rheims, Italy is taking no chances on her ancient treasures. Art galleries are being stripped of statuary and paintings. Every movable art object is being put in a bombproof. For what all the wars and invasions and general demoralization of ten centuries and more may have spared is nothing to a 42-centimetre shell, or to the bomb that drops from the sky from a circling aeroplane, aiming at the high spots.

The bronze horses whose trail in antiquity is not to be traced are once more on the move.

How much clemency and how much consideration should be shown the man whose horrible act was responsible for the death of Warden Allen's wife? Why, the very convicts within the walls would tear the murderer limb from limb if they could recognize him, and the fate would be fitting.

The Lincoln Highway markers on the Dixon section of the route are commencing to dim with age. It would be a good plan for the automobile boosters to get together and re-paint them.

Henry Ford is going to reduce the price of his automobiles, they say. The next thing he will do will be to furnish a neat little plush lined case to keep them in when not in use.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer in England has been handed a blank check for war expenses, but he has been warned that he must not make it out for more than five billions. Isn't that mean?

Parents of little Willie, or whatever his name happens to be, will be glad when the Glorious Fourth is gone again. Their main hope now is that Willie may remain all in one piece through the celebration.

Mayor Thompson is getting a great deal of deserved credit for his speedy settlement of the Chicago street car strike. The sane action of the strikers and the calm attitude of the citizens was also a factor and these people should be given credit for their commendable attitude.

Here is June weather. One day of this makes up for weeks of bad weather that has passed beyond, for yesterday's weather does not hurt us today and today's weather does us good.

SHINYTOWN.

In Shinytown the people cling to their belief that in the Spring all men should rise, and clean up alley, yard and lawn, till every sign of trash is gone—which scheme is wise. In Shinytown they burn old hats, and sticks and rags and bones and cats and kindred trash; all labor for the public weal, with fifty-seven kinds of zeal, and not for cash. This town is in a class alone; there flies and germs are quite unknown, year after year; no doctors' joints therein are built, and all the fell diseases wilt, when they come near. As there are no diseases nigh, the people don't know just how to die; death seems a joke; and some one has to shoot them down, when they are tired of Shinytown, and wish to croak. The village used to have a hearse before it killed the microbe curse, long, long ago; but now, since microbes cause no fuss, they use it for a jitney bus—five cents a throw. This is the village of delight, where all the folks are living right, a cheerful scene; your burg might be like Shinytown if all you men would buckle down, and make it clean.

A Narrative Fact Story Based Authoritatively on the Inexorable Mathematics of War—What Can Be Done to Oppose an Invading Army With Our Actual Present Resources In Regulars, Trained Militia, Untrained Citizens, Coast Defenses, Field Artillery, and All Other Weapons of Defense.

FOREWORD BY AUTHOR.

The only theoretical assumption in this series of articles is that the United States is attacked. Every other incident is a straight statement of what absolutely must happen in such a case with our military establishment remaining what it is today. In the words of certain foremost military executives of the United States army who have cognizance of these articles, it is "THE COLD TRUTH."

Nothing is overstated or understated. Every reference to military efficiency, supplies of cannon, ammunition and other implements, numbers of men in the various military units, and so forth, is based conscientiously on the actual resources shown today in the official records of the military establishments of the United States.

The description of the preparatory mobilization, assemblage and management of our regular army and militia has been approved as technically correct.

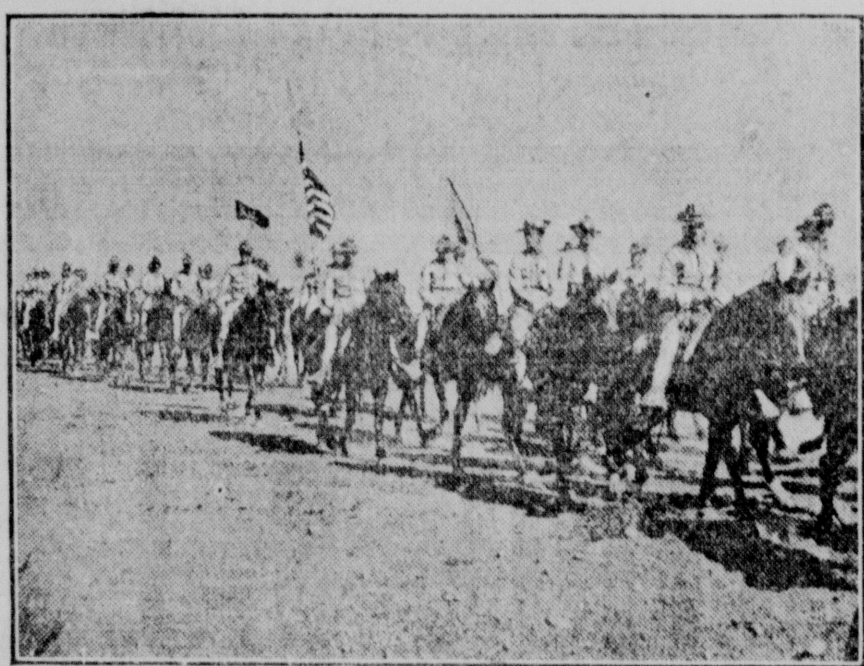

The description of the procedure of our small army in the presence of a large enemy army that has successfully landed is not a piece of "armchair strategy." It is what a numerically weaker force must inevitably do in modern war conditions.

This story is not a plea for militarism. It is not a plea for ANYTHING. It is intended simply to tell in logical sequence facts that do exist. It is the answer of military experts who long have faced these facts apprehensively to the question, "Can we defend ourselves?"

CHAPTER I.

"It Is Terrorism."

WASHINGTON, March 20.—The president, as commander in chief of the army and navy, has ordered a grand joint maneuver of the fleet, the regular army and the organized militia (national guard of divisions 5, 6, 7 and 8, comprising New England, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia.) No comment from official circles accompanied this dispatch when it was printed in the newspapers. None was needed. Ever since the great coalition had been formed America had faced the probability of war.

In the White House there was a conference of the cabinet, attended by the chief of staff of the United States army and the admiral who was president of the general board of the navy.

"The regular troops are moving," reported the chief of staff. "Every last man of 'em is on the way east." He laughed grimly. "I take no credit for it. The trains of the country can do it without changing a schedule. Do you know, gentlemen, that even the smaller roads often handle an excursion crowd as big as this whole army of ours?"

The secretary of war shrugged his shoulders. "Despite all the talk of recent years, despite all our official reports, I doubt if the people realize it." "Make them!" said the president. "Drive it home to them before war is brought to our coasts." He turned to the two chiefs of staff. "Give the newspapers a statement about the 'maneuvers' that will give the public the cold truth."

"The fleet," said the admiral to the newspaper correspondents an hour later, "is assumed to be an enemy fleet too powerful for opposition. It will attempt to land at least 100,000 fighting forces somewhere on the Atlantic coast. It is conceded that an actual enemy planning invasion would not come with less than that number. It is conceded also that a sufficiently powerful fleet can transport that number and more safely across the ocean. The navy, further, concedes the landing." [Authorities concede these matters.]

"But our coast defenses, admiral," spoke the correspondent of a Boston newspaper. "We've been told that those affairs with their fourteen and twelve inch rifled steel cannon and their twelve inch mortar batteries and mines and things are as powerful as any in the world and can stand off any fleet."

"They are not coast defenses, sir," answered the chief of staff. "They are harbor defenses. They can stop warships from entering our great harbors. They cannot prevent an enemy from landing on the coast out of their range. And on the Atlantic coast of the United States, there are hundreds of miles of utterly undefended beach where any number of men can land as easily as if they were trippers landing for a picnic. All those miles of shore and all the country behind them lie as open to invasion," he held out his hand, "as this."

"Then what's the use of them?" "They furnish a protected harbor within which our own navy could take refuge if defeated or scattered," said the admiral. "They make our protected cities absolutely secure against a purely naval attack. No navy could readily pass the defenses, and probably none would venture so close as even to bombard them seriously. Certainly no fleet could bombard the cities behind them."

"Therefore," he continued, "if an enemy wishes to bring war to us he must land an army of invasion. Our harbor defenses force him to do that; but, having forced him to bring the army, their function ceases. They cannot prevent him from landing it. We have to do that with our army."

"And could you stop him, or is that a military secret?" asked one of the party. He did it tentatively. He had been a war correspondent with foreign armies, and he did not expect a reply.

"My dear boy," answered the chief of staff promptly, "there probably isn't a general staff in the world that doesn't know all about us to the last shoe on the last army mule. We've got 88,000 men in the regular army, officers and privates. [See war department reports, 1915.]

"Of these, you may count out 19,000. They are noncombatants—cooks, hospital staffs, teamsters, armorers, blacksmiths, and all the other odds and ends that an army must have, but can't use for fighting. Now, cut out another 21,000 men. Those are fighting men, but they're not here. They're in Panama, Hawaii, the Philippines, China and Alaska—and we wish that we had

Myer, Virginia, for four troops of it, to Fort Sheridan, Illinois, for four more troops and a machine gun platoon and to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, for the remaining four troops needed to form a full regiment.

There was field artillery, whose component units were scattered, guns, horses and men, from the Vermont line to the Rio Grande. There were signal troops in Alaska, Texas, the Philippines and Panama.

This was no such mobilization as that giant mobilization in Europe, when a continent had stood still for days and nights while the soldiers moved to their appointed places. So far scattered was the American army, so small were its units, that only a few civilians here and there could have noticed that troops were being moved at all.

More than one unmilitary citizen, looking over his newspaper that morning, cursed the politics that had maintained the absurd, worthless, wasteful army posts, and cursed himself for having paid no heed in the years when thoughtful men had called on him and his fellows to demand a change.

More than one citizen, when he left his house to go to his accustomed work, looked up at the sky and wondered with a sinking heart how soon it would seem black with war.

It was a peaceful, soft sky, with baby clouds sleeping on its bland, blue arch. It radiated a tranquil warmth of coming spring, and under it the Atlantic ocean lay equally peaceful, equally soft, equally tranquil.

Yet even as the people of America were taking up the day's work, under that soft tranquil sea, a message was darting through the encrusted cables that swept away all peace.

Before noon, from sea to sea and from lakes to gulf, from the valley of the Hudson to the Sierras of the Rockies, from Jupiter inlet to the Philippines, ran the silent alarm of the telegraph that the great coalition had declared war!

Forty-eight hours later the combined battle fleet of the four nations put to sea with its army transports, bound for the American coast. [Speed of embarkation of a mobilized and prepared army as calculated by European military staff officers.]

The United States learned of its departure before its rear guard had cleared the land. The news did not come from American spies. It came from the coalition itself.

War, the chameleon, as Clausewitz called it, was presenting a new aspect of its unexpected phases. Not a cable had been cut following the declaration of war, and now the submarine cables and the wireless began to bring official news from the enemy—news addressed not to the American government, but to the American people.

It was news that told of an invulnerable fleet carrying more than a thousand rifled cannon of the largest caliber ever borne by ships in all the world.

It told of enough great battleships alone (and named them) to match the republic's fleet, with a Dreadnought for every effective American ship of any kind. [One thousand rifled cannon could be enumerated from the naval lists of less than four powers. Less than four powers could match our navy with battleships.]

"Clever!" said the secretary of state to the president. "It is terrorism." "Don't you think that you'd better reconsider your idea of letting this go through?" asked the secretary of war. "It's pretty dangerous stuff."

"It's the nation's war," answered the president. "Will it demoralize our people to know the truth, even under the guise of terrorism? Do you know in whose hands I'm going to leave that question?"

"I can't guess," said the secretary. "In the hands of the newspapers," replied the president.

The newspapers did not require to be told that the purpose of this novel news service from the enemy was terrorism.

They answered terrorism by printing the news. Then the sea coast cities began to call on Washington. By telegraph and telephone they demanded protection. It was a chorus from Maine to Georgia. Into the White House thronged the congressmen.

"Defend us! Defend our people! Defend our towns!" said they. [This is exactly what happened during the Spanish-American war.]

"We cannot do it!" said the chief of staff. "No wit of man can guess at what point of many hundred miles the enemy will strike. He may land on the New Jersey coast to take Philadelphia. He may land on Long Island to march to New York. He may strike at Boston. He may land between Boston and New York, on the Rhode Island or Massachusetts coasts, and keep us guessing whether he'll turn west to New York or east to Boston. He may even strike for both at once."

"Then why not put men into each place to protect it?" demanded a congressman. "Are these great cities to be left wide open?"

"You know how many regulars we've got. Do you know how many effective men we've pulled together by calling out those eastern divisions of organized militia? Their enrolled strength is 50,000 men. Their actual active strength as shown by attendance figures has been only about 30 per cent of that, but we were lucky. [From United States war department reports for 1915 on militia organization.]

"This danger has brought out all, probably, that were able to come. Still, there are less than 20,000 men, and not quite half of those have had good field training. We need them. We need them so badly that we're putting them all in the first line. But it's a little bit like—well, it's murder."

"Then you mean to say?"

"I mean to say," answered the chief of staff, with a set face, "that the army is going to take what it has and do its best. But it's going to do it in its own way. No enemy will dream of landing an invading army unless it is decisively, overpoweringly superior to our own. Now, congressman, the only way for an inferior army to accomplish anything is to refuse battle until the chances are as favorable as they can be made. The inferior force must retire before a superior. It must force the invader to follow till he is weakened by steadily lengthening lines of communications. His difficulties of food and ammunition transport grow. He becomes involved in strange terrain. Last, but not least, he gets more and more deeply into a land filled with a hostile population. But if we must defend a specific place at all hazards then we must stand and give battle—well, it will be only one battle."

"You mean?"

"I mean that such a battle is decided already. It was decided years ago—when the country refused to prepare."

"Good God, man!" the congressman wiped his forehead with a trembling fat hand. "I can't go back and tell my people that."

"You'd better not," said the general grimly.

The unhappy man and other unhappy men like him went back to their constituencies knowing that now no campaign oratory would serve. Softer the news they must and would, but they were the bearers of ill tidings, and they knew what comes to these.

The stricken cities heard. From all the great coast, with its piled gold and silver, there arose a cry. Men shook their fists and cursed the machinery of politics that had worked through the blind years to hinder, to deceive and to waste. The pork barrel ceased all at once to be the great American joke.

"Throw men into our harbor defenses!" cried the cities of the coast. "Hold them, hold them!"

"We have 17,000 trained regulars and 50,000 militia more or less experienced to handle these complex giants," answered the army implacably. "There are 1,184 guns and mortars to handle. It leaves no men to defend the works. To throw the mobile army or any part of it into the defenses for mere protection is only to lock them up. The mobile army must defend the defenses from outside. If it cannot do it they fall." [This statement does not betray a military secret. It is well known to all foreign governments that we cannot defend our coast defenses against land attack.]

"Where is the mobile army?" cried the cities. "Send it here!" clamored each city.

There was no reply. Somewhere behind the Atlantic coast lay the mobile army, silent.

The cities stared to sea. They listened for sounds from the sea. That serving ocean that had made them rich and great had become suddenly terrible, a secret place where there brooded wrath. Every day great multitudes, stirred by helpless, vague impulse, moved toward the water fronts and gazed down the harbors. Every rumble of blasts or heavy vehicle, every sudden great noise startled the cities into a quick: "Listen! Cannons!"

"Where is the fleet?" The question ran from Maine to Florida, till it, too, became one great clamor, storming at the White House. Again there was no answer.

Days before, the American fleet had steamed out of the eastern end of Long Island sound. The tall, gray Dreadnoughts and armored cruisers, each with its circling, savage brood of destroyers; light cruisers, torpedo boats, seagoing submarines, hospital ships, auxiliaries and colliers, one by one they had passed into the open sea and vanished.

But though no man knew where it was, from its unknown place it spoke by wireless to Washington, and through Washington to the nation. From "somewhere between the Virginia capes and the northern end of the Bahama islands" where it lay, it had sent out its feelers across the sea toward the oncoming foe—swift gray feelers whose tall skeleton fire control tops were white with watching sailors. And so, presently, between the enemy and the American coast there lay a line of relays to catch the news and pass it on to the nation and its fleet.

CHAPTER II.

The Inevitable Order to an Inferior Fleet.

MORE than a hundred miles of sea, said the news, were covered by the advancing fleet. It was a hundred miles of steel forts, and outside of them, dashing back and forth in ceaseless patrol, were the lighter and faster craft, consisting of destroyers and small, swift cruisers.

The scout cruiser Birmingham had spied ships inside even the inner line. But they were not transports. They were still warships. The troop transports were so far within all the protective cordons that the American scouts, lying far along the horizon, could not even sight their masts.

The enemy fleet scarcely made an attempt to attack the spying vessels. It seemed almost that the enormous mass was too insolently sure of its power to trouble about the scouts.

So, with watching cruisers and destroyers hanging to its sides day and night, the invaders' armada moved westward as steady as a lifeless, wicked machine. And the outer cordon held true.

It did not move slowly, majestically, like the armored line. Incessantly it swept back and forth and in and out, patrolling the sea to a distance so far from the battleships that the American scouts rarely could approach nearer than to sight from their own tops the tops of the Dreadnoughts.

As the enemy covered the sea, so he filled the air. Constantly all day long, floating and drifting with the soft white clouds far beyond the farthest extent of the cordon, his aeroplanes surveyed the water world. And all day long and all night long the ships' wireless told the air.

The American wireless, too, played forth its electric waves of air night and day. From daring scouts to hidden fleet and to waiting nation went the story out of the far sea. The American millions knew the progress of the coming enemy as if the fleet were an army moving along a populous highway of the land.

The nation watched the implacable, remorseless advance breathlessly, apprehensively, but behind its apprehension there was hope. "Surely, surely," men said to each other, "our splendid sailors will get at them!"

Accustomed by its history to expect thrilling deeds of dash and enterprise that should wrest success out of disaster, the United States waited for the deed.

It came. Out of the far Atlantic came the story. It came from the battleship Kearsarge and went to the Chester, it was passed on by the Chester and picked up by the Tacoma, and the Tacoma tossed it into the air and sent it to the coast.

"Engaged," said the Kearsarge, "have—sunk," and then there came a break in the message. "Destroyer—light—cruiser"—spoke the wireless again, and stopped. "Armored—cruiser," spoke the wireless again in half an hour. "Port—beam—disabled—withdrawing—pre-Dreadnought—abait—starboard—beam—firing—14,000—yards—Dreadnought—port—beam"—Again there came an abrupt check to the wireless.

To the men on the fleet "somewhere off the Virginia capes," and to the men in newspaper offices from ocean to ocean, it was as if they were witnessing the fight. Indeed, the presses had some of it printed and on the streets before the battleship's story was done.

"Dreadnought!"—started the wireless again; "17,000—yards—am—struck—after—gun—upper—turret—am—struck—forward—gun—lower—turret—dis—mounted—am—struck—after—gun—lower—turret"—

The air fell silent. It was the last word from the Kearsarge.

"As a man," said the admiral that night to the correspondents who pressed him for an interview, "I am glad that the Kearsarge did it. As admiral I can only say that her destruction, old though she was, is a heavy loss to us that would not be balanced even if, besides the ships she sank, she had sunk both the Dreadnoughts. We have ordered the fleet to keep itself intact."

"Does that mean that there are to be no raids?"

"It cannot be done," answered the admiral. "With sufficient machinery heroism can do great deeds today as ever. Without the machinery it can only go down singing." [Certain naval experts, basing their opinion on study of the recent naval battles, claim that a difference of as little as 10 per cent in efficiency between fleets otherwise absolutely equal means inevitable destruction for the inferior fleet.]

"The enemy transports are within an immodest line of great ships. At the margin of their zone of fire is another armored line of Dreadnoughts. And the outer cordon is at the margin of that zone of fire. Thus one of our raiding ships would have to break through at least thirty miles, every inch of it under fire from half a dozen ships. It cannot be done. This enemy fleet could be broken only by brute force. To attack in force with our inferior fleet would mean simply that we should smash ourselves against him as unavailingly as if we smashed ourselves full speed ahead against a rocky coast."

"But surely at night our ships can dash in!" insisted the public, reluctant to give up romantic hopes. "Wait—and some night you will see!"

Then there came a wireless relayed from the Conyngham, biggest and swiftest of the American destroyer divisions. She has circled the whole enemy fleet, flying around it through days and nights at the full speed of her thirty knots. Her message told why there could be no daring raids at night.

There was no night. All the sea, ran the Conyngham's tale, was lit like a flaming city. The outer cordon played its searchlights far toward each horizon. It played other lights inward, toward its own battleships. And the line of battleships in turn, kept mighty searchlights bow and stern steadily on their transports.

Each transport had its guard, whose bright surveillance never shifted, never wavered, from dusk to dawn. These sentinel Dreadnoughts never turned a searchlight to sweep the surrounding sea. They held their transports steadily in the white glare.

There was not an inch of ocean within their lines that was not ablaze. A fragment of driftwood could not have floated into that vivid sea without being detected by a hundred eyes.

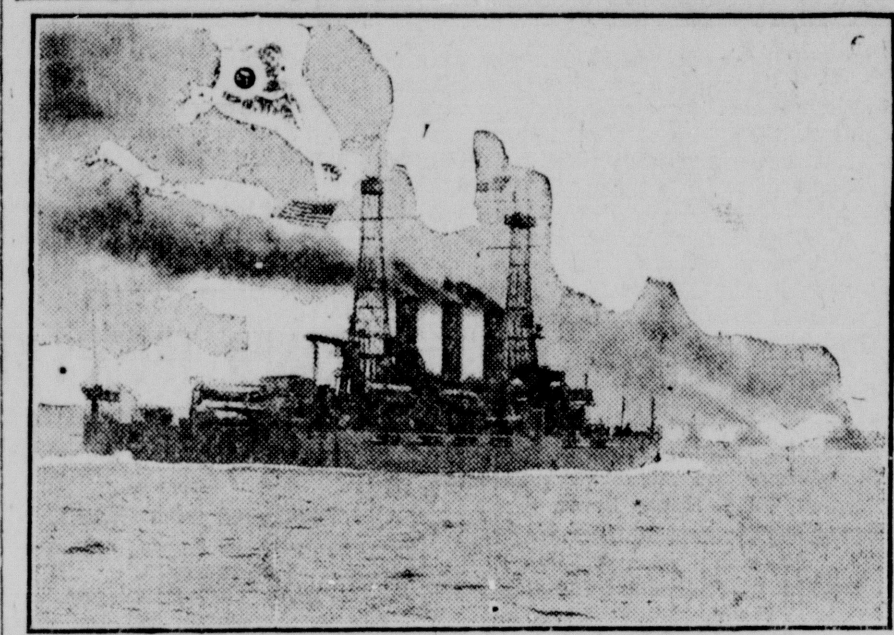

But those steady, unshifting lights told the Conyngham the secret story of the hidden transports. Though the destroyer's men could not even have sighted the tops of their masts in the brightest light of day, they could count the fixed light beams, distant as they were.

In the war and navy departments they made up estimates from the code report. When it was done the chief of staff nodded. "Of course our information assured us that they would send at least 150,000 men. Now that we have an idea how many transports they've got, we are sure of it. And they are bringing vast munitions."

The Alabama, sister ship to the Kearsarge, by haphazard fortune got between two enemy scouts and the main fleet and accomplished by sudden attack what she never could have accomplished by speed. She sank them within twenty minutes and returned without injury. It was thirteen inch guns against eight inch, and the story was as it always is. The inferior enemy ships went down like pasteboard under the fire of the turret guns on the American vessel.

On the same day, almost at the same hour, the scout cruiser Birmingham, at the other end of the enemy line, sent report that the destroyer Bainbridge, thickest of the division, had driven her two eighteen-inch torpedoes home and sunk an armored cruiser that had fallen out of line to repair some unknown injury to its machinery. The Bainbridge did not tell its own story. The little boat and her men were blasted into nothing within ten minutes by a battle cruiser that had turned to protect her mate.

These disasters, that might have been appalling to a lesser sea power, left the great navy of the coalition unshaken. Steadily, imperturbably, it kept on its way.

So there came the day when coasters and small craft sped wildly into the shelter of Boston and New York harbors, into Long Island sound and into the Delaware and Chesapeake bays. They had seen the enemy.

Next morning, in a gray, transparent, peaceful April dawn, watchers on the coast, gazing across the empty, flat Atlantic to the immense half circle of the horizon, saw innumerable tiny objects just sticking up above the rim of the sea. Through the glass they seemed to be little perches of skeleton iron built in the deep ocean.

Set at beautifully precise distances apart, they dotted the sharply outlined edge of water and sky north and south far beyond vision.

Innocent and quiet they appeared as they stood there, growing slowly, very slowly, up out of the far sea.

And the roaring presses, spouting forth extra editions east, west, north and south, told the United States of America:

"Invaders Appear Off American Coast."

Mrs. Baker So Weak—Could Not Do Her Work—Found Relief In Novel Way.

Adrian, Mich.—"I suffered terribly with female weakness and backache and got so weak that I could hardly do my work. When I washed my dishes I had to sit down and when I would sweep the floor I would get so weak that I would have to get a drink every few minutes, and before I did my dusting I would have to lie down. I got so poorly that my folks thought I was going into consumption. One day I found a piece of paper blowing around the yard and I picked it up and read it. It said 'Saved from the Grave,' and told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for women. I showed it to my husband and he said, 'Why don't you try it?' So I did, and after I had taken two bottles I felt better and I said to my husband, 'I don't need any more,' and he said 'You had better take it a little longer anyway.' So I took it for three months and got well and strong."—MRS. ALONZO E. BAKER, 9 Tecumseh St., Adrian, Mich.

Not Well Enough to Work.

In these words is hidden the tragedy of many a woman, housekeeper or wage earner who supports herself and is often helping to support a family, on meagre wages. Whether in house, office, factory, shop, store or kitchen, woman should remember that there is one tried and true remedy for the ills to which all women are prone, and that is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It promotes that vigor which makes work easy. The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

SQUELCH ORGAN
HOSTILE TO U. S.

German Government Suppresses
Berlin Tages Zeitung.

ACTION DEEMED SIGNIFICANT

Newspaper Was Organ of Radical Element Headed by Count Von Reventlow—Washington Sees in Step Conciliatory Attitude of Berlin Government Toward U. S.

Berlin, June 23.—The suspension of Berlin Tages Zeitung is for an indefinite period, the owners have been informed. The government shut down on the paper solely because of the sensational tone and substance of a series of articles being written by Count Von Reventlow, in which he bitterly attacked the United States and urged the German government to continue its submarine warfare in any manner it saw fit.

He declared that international law could not be applied to submarines, as such laws were framed before submarines were invented, and continued in the article which caused the government to act.

"And one can as little employ these rules in an objective common sense way, as for instance, one could bring the sticking to his office of an incompetent statesman into healthful relations to the wellbeing of the whole people."

The prompt action in suppressing the Tages Zeitung is only one of several indications that the government is desirous of finding a common ground for an understanding with the United States.

Regards It Significant.
Washington, June 23.—The action of the Berlin authorities in suppressing the Berlin Tages Zeitung newspaper which was publishing Count Von Reventlow's articles on the submarine issue with the United States was regarded here as highly significant.

In view of the character of the Reventlow articles the suppression of the paper is taken to indicate that the German government does not wish German opinion influenced against the United States nor public opinion in this country influenced by reckless talk at this time. It is now believed there is no longer any room to doubt the genuineness of other reports from Berlin that the German government is earnestly seeking to avoid serious trouble with the United States.

Represented Extremists.

Count Von Reventlow's articles, or such extracts from them as were cable to this country, have been followed by articles here. It has been considered here that he represented the extremists with regard to the submarine issue. Officials have looked on him as one of the leaders of the large element in Germany which would have the government virtually ignore President Wilson's demands and let the United States then do what it pleased. Reports reaching here during the last ten days have satisfied officials that this element was not certain of having its way and that it was more than likely that the government would listen to the more conservative groups favoring a conciliatory policy towards the United States. Suppression of the paper in which the Reventlow articles have been appearing means, according to opinion here, that the extremist element is now publicly at least in official disfavor.

Forecasts Conciliatory Attitude.

Reliable reports received from Germany have not led officials here to believe that any triumphs of the more conservative element will mean that the demands of President Wilson are to be fully granted. It is expected that it will mean only that the German government will adopt a most conciliatory tone and endeavor to convince the United States that under the circumstances of Germany's position in relation to England her submarine operations are warranted even though admittedly beyond the pale of the law.

Opinion here is fast crystallizing into the belief that with the single proviso that no more American lives are threatened by German submarine attacks the situation has passed its dangerous stage. It is believed that Germany's next note will be lengthy and argumentative, bringing into the discussion all the principles involved in her grievance against the British use of their sea power.

Puts Ban on German Source.

London, June 23.—An order in council is about to be issued prohibiting exportation of all goods to Holland, except those consigned to the Netherlands Overseas trust. This is expected to stop the trade now believed to be passing through Holland into Germany.

Danville Gets Illinois Golfers.
Peoria, Ill., June 23.—Danville got the 1916 golf tournament of the Central Illinois Country Clubs association.

Your date is important. Please look at the little yellow tag on your Telegraph.

A BIT OF ADVICE

FIRST—DON'T DELAY. SECOND—DON'T EXPERIMENT.

If you suffer from backache, headaches or dizzy spells; if you rest poorly and are languid in the morning; if the kidney secretions are irregular and unnatural in appearance do not delay. In such cases the kidneys often need help.

Doan's Kidney Pills are especially prepared for kidney trouble. They are recommended by thousands. Can Dixon residents desire more convincing proof of their effectiveness than the statement of a Dixon citizen who has used them and willingly testifies to their worth?

Mrs. J. Caritey, 511 Spruce street, Dixon, says: "Some few years ago I suffered from a severe attack of kidney trouble. My back was so sore that I couldn't walk erect and mornings it was hard for me to get out of bed. It was next to impossible for me to stoop over. I had tried various medicines, but they had no benefit and had about given up hope of getting better. A friend recommended Doan's Kidney Pills so I got some at Leake Bros. Co.'s drug store. By the time I had finished two boxes I was able to sit up in bed and my back felt stronger. I used eight boxes and had no more trouble until I injured my back a short time ago. Doan's Kidney Pills then gave me immediate relief."

Price 50¢ at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Caritey had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.
